

Training: Workshop Leadership

What is this?	Highly developed and experienced leader / facilitator of workshops, conferences and seminars.
How did I get this?	Using initial adult training concepts and experience within Australia and Asia. Working in complex and difficult environments – sometimes hostile. Obtaining agreement in policy and strategy workshops between governments and industry representatives. Developing new Australian competency standards from 'green fields' projects running industry workshops in all states and territories. In mining, telecommunications, property, finance and local government. Developing and managing an IT team of professionals as CIO BP Internet with daily product build workshops. Trained and accredited in the use of the ZING technology to fast track the development of ideas, strategy and policy in group situations.
What do I use it for?	Most consulting and training projects require the ability to effectively run workshops, work with people in groups and produce results in a variety of conditions. This skill is used extensively in these situations.
Who could benefit from this?	Companies, government departments and consulting firms who require the services of an experienced and effective workshop leader – especially where agreements, strategy or policy development is required.
